

All Around Town.

The innate nature of the human being to flirt with the fickle goddess of chance, to wager value against value with the hope that luck will come your way, is cropping out in the precincts of Paris in many unique ways. One of these grows out of the fad to "save the tags" and other premium drawing certificates that are ever present in the cigarette cocoon, on each plug of tobacco, and has been known to be on the loaf of bread that the baker sends to our homes.

It is no unusual sight to see bevy of children, some of them toddlers, "bucking the tiger of chance" by watching cigarette certificates. They do it in their own unique manner. One will flip a coupon in the air; it falls to the ground with a certain side up. The other will follow suit, and if his slip of paper lands with the same side up he has "matched" his opponent, and wins the slip. Then it is his turn to take the initiative. He flips a coupon; it floats to the ground; and he wins or loses as the case may be. If the coupon falls with an adverse side up, the last to catch his coupon loses, for he has failed to "match" his opponent.

This is a favorite pastime with school boys, and the craze is not confined alone to the boys. The little girls have found the desire to win something contagious, and they are alert to clip the coupons from almost any old thing, and to go the "matching game same as the boys. It is not strange that one little girl will have all the coupons in a neighborhood, having carried in the favor of "Good Luck" in her gambling with her playmates.

You cigarette smokers, haven't you often been stopped by some eager eyed boy or girl with the question: "Got any cigarette pictures?"

The other night a man who had imbibed a little too much sauntered into Craven's quick lunch emporium when everybody was busy. Steadying himself against the counter, he vainly attempted to attract the attention of Claude Croe, the chef on duty, who was busily waiting on a numerous assortment of customers all at once. Finally Crowe got over the rush, and taking heed of the man, asked the "soused" party what he wanted.

"I want some brains," was the reply. "We don't keep the kind you need," replied Crowe, in a sarcastic voice, and the inebriated one passed slowly out.

"Say, do you know the three stingiest men in Paris?" asked a sport of the writer, the other night during a social gabfest.

The newspaper man having dealings only with the wealthy classes, could not name them.

"Well, kiddo, they're so and so and so and so," calling them by their names. "Why, one of these chaps won't drink all the water he wants unless he can get it from someone who takes ice; another stops his clock at night to save the wear and tear on the machinery, and the third makes the members of his family write in a small hand in order to save ink. Neither one takes a newspaper. They claim that reading newspapers wears out their spectacles."

Did you ever hear a woman tell a story where she fumbled the beginning, got the middle of it all mixed up, then owned at the end she had really forgotten the point of the story after all, but that it was very funny?

A remarkably skinny young woman, whose frame seemed to hardly have enough flesh on it to cover the bones, drifted into John Doty's photograph gallery the other day and after the preliminaries were arranged, posed for a photograph. She was exceedingly anxious to have a good likeness and of course Doty was exceedingly anxious to please her. After the sitting was concluded and the walking skeleton was taking her departure, she turned to the photographer and remarked, "I wish you would take great pains in finishing my pictures." "Why, certainly, Miss," replied Doty, "for I see you want to be well developed for once in your life."

A Christmas Present That Means Something.

There is one especially good thing about a Christmas present of the Youth's Companion. It shows that the giver thought enough of you to give you something worth while.

It is easy to choose something costing a great deal more which is absolutely useless, but to choose a present costing only $1.75 that will provide a long year's entertainment, and the uplifting companionship of the wise and great, is another matter. There is one present, however, which does just that—The Youth's Companion.

If you want to know whether it is appropriate or welcome, just visit the home of some Companion subscriber on Companion day.

Do not choose any Christmas present until you have examined the Companion. We will send you free sample copies and the beautiful Prospectus for 1911, telling something of how the Companion has recently been enlarged and improved.

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free all the numbers of 1910 issued after the money is received; also the Companion's Art Calendar for 1911 lithographed in twelve colors and gold. These will be sent to reach the subscriber Christmas morning, if desired.

You, too, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Calendar.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION, 144 Berkeley St., Boston, Mass. New subscriptions received at this office.

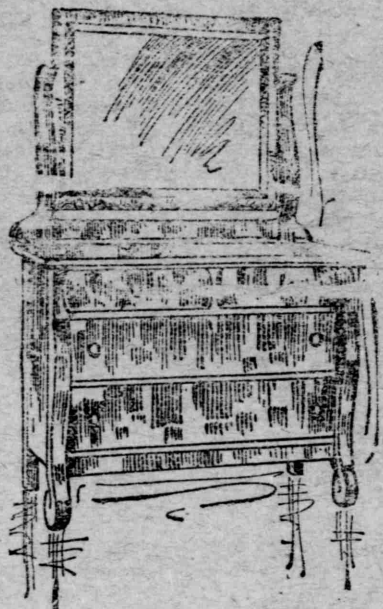

Humor and Genius.

Men of humor are always in some degree men of genius; wits are rarely so, although a man of genius may, among other gifts, possess wit, as Shakespeare—Coleridge.

David B. Hill Dies Suddenly.

David Bennett Hill, former United States Senator, died suddenly Thursday morning at his home near Albany, N. Y.

He had been ill nearly three weeks with a cold and bilious attack, but his condition had not been considered serious. He was sitting up in bed, when he was seized with an acute dilation of the heart. Death quickly followed with none but a nurse at his bedside.

Mr. Hill had long been a sufferer from Bright's disease. Although he retired from active participation in politics following the presidential election of 1904, Senator Hill was deeply interested in the program of the present campaign. As late as last Friday he discussed the situation with Judge Parker, who was then preparing to make a tour of the state in the interest of the Democratic ticket.

Need for Sentiment.

To be true to our true selves we should face the fact that the things of sentiment are as real a part of life as tables and chairs, as meals and sleep.

Three Hardest Words.

A learned man has said that the three hardest words to pronounce in the English language are "I was mistaken." When Frederick the Great wrote to the senate, "I have just lost a battle, and it's entirely my own fault," Goldsmith says, "his confession showed more greatness than all his victories."
